Interview preparation

Your interview answer skips the decision

You explain what got delivered. But the interviewer still cannot see how you chose the course of action.

Delivery summary

Decision evidence

Two kinds of evidence

Separate delivery from decision evidence

Both matter. They answer different questions.

Delivery summary

What was completed, your contribution and the actual outcome.

Decision evidence

The alternatives, the trade-off and your reason for choosing.

How judgement becomes evidence

A claim needs something to inspect

In Proving Ground, calls are marked against a published standard. Your strongest answers are kept in your own words for interviews or a portfolio.

Preparation method

Build one defensible interview example

Start with a decision you genuinely owned.

1. Reconstruct the options
   Name the realistic alternatives available at the time.
2. Expose the trade-off
   Explain the constraint and what your choice sacrificed.
3. Defend the reasoning
   Use what you knew then; separate your rationale from the outcome.

Test the work before the application

Try Proving Ground's three-call decision exercise to see what the standard asks of your reasoning before deciding whether to apply.
