Planning domestic cleaning

Estimating cleaning hours from rooms alone

A room count describes your home, but not all the cleaning you want done. Start with the work, not just the spaces.

Scope: what is included

Priority: what comes first

What shapes the estimate

Account for the work inside

Maid2Clean identifies more than room count when estimating time.

- Home size and rooms
  Record the spaces you want included in the clean.
- Room contents
  Consider how much is in each room.
- Cleaning depth
  Describe the level of cleaning you want, not just the room name.

Example planning notes

Separate scope from priority

Your full list and your first priorities serve different purposes.

Scope: what is included

Kitchen, bathroom and hallway.

Priority: what comes first

Bathroom first, then kitchen surfaces, then the hallway floor.

Practical preparation

Write a brief you can discuss

Turn the room list into an ordered set of tasks.

1. Name the work
   Pair each room with the specific cleaning jobs you want completed.
2. Set the order
   Put essential tasks ahead of jobs that can wait.
3. Match your chosen hours
   Be ready to discuss which tasks take priority within that time.
